The listed devices are CE-certified medical devices of class III, according to medical device directive 93/42/EEC rules 8 and 17.

They consist of purified, animal tissue derived components. The manufacturing processes of the listed devices include several steps which render the animal tissues non-viable and ensure adequate safety of the medical devices in relation to the transfer of infectious agents.

Since only non-viable, cell-free animal material is used, the listed devices do not qualify as xenotransplants within the meaning of the internationally recognized definition "transplantation or infusion of living cells, tissues or organs of non-human origin".

Therefore, the therapeutic implantation of the listed devices does not affect the eligibility for donating blood, other tissues or whole organs.
